Dormant Pruning

Dormant pruning also referred to as rejuvenation pruning is when a shrub is pruned and is reduced in height and/or density, when the shrub is dormant. In the Chicagoland area this period is typically between December and early March.

Why Dormant Prune?

Reduce overall height on shrubs that are blocking windows, doorways or sidewalks. Reshape and correct the form of shrubs as desired. Promote new growth from the base, resulting in a healthier shrub, often times with more flower blooms the following spring.
